BREACH OF PROMISE.—A suit for breach of promise has just been decided in the New York Marine Court which has caused some excitement among the colored circles of New York and Brooklyn. Josephine J. Ross, the plaintiff, is a seamstress who counts among her patrons some of the wealthy families of the city, and the defendant, Messrs. P. Saunders, is a trusted employee of the National Express Company, for which he has worked over ten years. The acquaintance commenced in 1872, when Ross was partly in charge of an aristocratic mansion in Madison Avenue, and the pair kept company in style. An engagement followed, which continued for five years. They attended balls, parties, church parties and oaks walks together, and a voluminous and most affectionate correspondence passed between them. She often requested him to fulfill his promise of marriage, but he always put it off on pretexts of inability to support her. A quarrel at last occurred, and they returned the presents that had been exchanged. He pretended to have burned up two letters of his fiancée, and she refused to give up those he had written. These loving epistles were read as part of the evidence of the prosecution, and elicited great merriment in the large assembly gathered in the court room. The only letters of the plaintiff were written after the estrangement, in which she jocosely mentions her return. The trial occupied the court all day, and when the jury retired in the evening they were allowed to order cigars for the while deliberation. A scaled verdict was rendered giving the plaintiff $1,200.

MEDICINAL.

LIVER

This important organ weighs but about three pounds, and all the blood that circulates through the body (about three gallons) passes through it at least once every half hour, to have the bile and other impurities strained or filtered from it. Bile is the natural purgative of the bowels, and if the Liver becomes torpid it is not separated from the blood, but carried into the system, and in trying to escape through the pores of the skin, causes it to turn yellow or a dirty brown color. The stomach becomes diseased and Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation, Headache, Biliousness, Jaundice, Chills, Malarial Fevers, Piles, Scurvy and Sour Stomach, and general debility follow. MER- RELL'S LIVER PATENT, the great vegetable discovery for torpidity, causes the Liver to throw off its burden on two or three times a day, through the veins to all parts of the system, and in trying to escape through the pores of the skin, causes it to turn yellow or a dirty brown color.
